To whom it may concern,

Steven Tey worked at Noodle Partners as a Product Intern under my supervision during the summer of 2019. During this time, Steven earned the respect and gratitude of myself and the rest of the Noodle Partners team, and I enthusiastically recommend him for any future work opportunities.

Steven was assigned to lead two impactful projects that accelerated our business objectives and developed his competency with the Product Manager skillset.

First, Steven was responsible for learning, setting up and documenting how Noodle Partner would utilize Salesforce Marketing Cloud for email drip campaigns. He began by creating an in-depth user experience journey that clearly translated the business need into product requirements. He then navigated online training materials, attended in-person workshops, and met independently with Salesforce -- culminating in his successful execution, documentation, and handoff to other team members.

Next, Steven was my product lead on the evaluation, selection, and initial implementation of centralized contract management software. He collaborated with our CFO to propose the platform to our CEO, and once approved, followed with user research, requirements gathering, and ultimately guiding an implementation consultant to execute the design.

For both of the projects he led, and for others he contributed to, Steven continuously impressed his team members with his outstanding work ethic, quick problem-solving, professional demeanor and positive attitude. I can definitively state that Steven would be an excellent addition to any team, and have the upmost confidence he will soon begin an exciting and impactful career.

Sincerely,

Jeremy Rudy
